LEANDER DEFEATS NEW COLLEGE BY HALF A LENGTH.

THE THAMES ROWING CLUB WINS FROM THE FIRST TRINITY-DR. M'DOWELL LOSES HIS HEAT TO BEAUMONT.

[SY CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.] Copyright: 1896 : by The Tribune Association.

London, July 8.-There was a falling off in the attendance at Henley to-day, owing to the absence of the Americans, whose interest lapsed with Yale's defeat, but there was an improvement in the racing, many of the contests being close and exciting.

The great race of the day was the heat between Leander and New College for the Grand Challenge Cup. It was a hot struggle from beming to end, each crew starting forty-two okes, and each alternately spurting and leading. New College was over one length ahead at the half mile, but Leander drew up at three-quarters, and won by half a length. Three of Leander's men fell back into the boat when the post was passed, and the whole crew were greatly exhausted by the tremendous effort required for winning the race.

Yale men were delighted with Leander's victory, since it proved that they had been defeated the best crew on the river. Leander's time was considerably faster than that of yesterday, indicating that they had not been pushed in the last half mile by Yale. The young blood of New College made a gallant struggle for the Cup, and fought with desperation every yard of the course. The Thames Rowing Club, by its victory over First Trinity by one length, won the right to contest the final heat to-morrow, but with a poor chance of carrying off the Cup, unless Leander suffers from to-day's exhausting

The other contests were less interesting, but The French crew won a good race half a length, and were heartly apuded. Eton's second victory was also popular, as it is always the favorite crew on the river. Dr. McDowell was defeated for the Diamond Sculls by Beaumont, after apparently having the race well in hand, so that Americans will win no prizes at the regatta.

The Yale men, after the terrible struggle between Leander and New College, are convinced that they were outclassed by at least two crews, but several crews showed as much exhaustion as Yale's did yesterday.

DETAILS OF THE HENLEY RACES. LEANDER WILL ROW IN THE FINAL HEAT FOR

THE GRAND CHALLENGE CUP WITH THAMES -HOW DR. M'DOWELL LOST-MR. DE-PEW AMONG THE SPECTATORS.

Henley-on-Thames, July 8.-The principal features of the programme of the Royal Henley Regatta were the second trial heats of the eightcared contest for the Grand Challenge Cup and the single scull contest for the Diamond Scuils, to determine which crews and individual oarsmen shall row in the final heat in each race to-morrow. The first contest of the day was the second heat for the Thames Challenge Cup for eight oars. The start was made about 11:30. The heat was rowed by the Kingston Rowing Club and the eight of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The latter won by a

The fourth heat in the race for the Grand Challenge Cup having been a bye for the Thames Rowing Club, the fifth heat of that race was the firs that series to be contested to-day, between the Leander Rowing Club and the crew of New lege, Oxford, the two crack crews in the list of entries for the Grand Challenge Cup. In spite entries for the Grand Chailenge Cup. In spite of the magnificent showing made by the Leanders against Yale yesterday the New College men were the favorites. The New College men started first at a stroke of from twenty-two to forty-three. Leander rowed at a stroke ranging from twenty-one to forty-two. The New College boat had a lead in a minute, having kept in front fro clear lead in a minute, having kept in front from the first stroke. There was space between the boats at the Rectory, and New College was a length and a quarter ahead at the half mile, a lead which was maintained until the boats reached rowed over by New College in 3:20. Passing Faw Court, Leander began to spurt and drew up level with the Oxford men at the mile post. Then the nose of the Leanders' boat showed in front, and at the Isthmian was three-quarters of a length ad. Passing the Isthmian the New College crew made a grand spurt, but the Bucks side favored the Leander boat, and in the desperate trial of speed and endurance for the finish the finer form of the Leander men was clearly apparent, the latter boat crossing the finish line half a length ahead in 7:06. Both crews were pretty well pumped. The race splendid one and both crews were well

In the sixth heat for the Grand Challenge Cup the Thames Rowing Club and First Trinity, Cambridge, were the contestants. The heat was won by the Thames crew by a length, and the final heat for the will be rowed between the Thames Rowing Club and the eight of the Leander Rowing Club to-

In the heat for the Diamond Sculls, between Vivian Nickalls and the Hon. Rupert Guinness, both men sarted with a stroke of from nineteen to thirty-six. Nickalls went to the front immediately, but crossed over to Guinness's station, from which side Guinness drove him back. At the Isthmian Guinness was clear of Nickalls and continued to increase his lead, until he crossed the finish line four lengths abead, in 9:19.

The sixth heat of the race for the Diamond Sculls, between R. K. Beaumont, of the Burton-on-Trent Rowing Club, and Dr. W. S. McDowell, of the Delaware Boat Club of Chicago, who beat the Hon. E. A. Guinness, of Eaton College, so easily yesterday, was regarded as of especial importance, in view of the fact that if the doctor should vanquish Beaumont as eastly as he did Guinness he would stand a good chance of capturing the Diamond trophy from the Hon. Rupert Guinness, the holder of the Diamond Soulis, and the only other survivor of the trial heats,

He was rowing at a thirty-six stroke and Beaumont McDowell tried to take Beaumont's water, but owing to the strength of the breeze he was forced back. He then seemed to be playing with Beaumont. He was three-quarters of a length ahead at the half-mile post, but when they reached Faw-ley Court, he was barely leading. At Fawley Court self and ran half a length ahead of McDowell. The Yale crew remained quiet all of last evening. The Yale crew remained quiet all of last evening. The men are all well, and accept the situation philosophically, as do the others of the defeated crews in the regatta. Yesterday's race between Yale and Leander is still the leading topic of conversation and discussion. Everybody praises the muscle and pluck shown by the Yale men. The Yale men will leave their quarters at the Marsh Mills House Friday morning, and will attend a dinner to be given in their honor by the Sports Club in London that evening. It is likely that upon that occasion Qaptain Treadway will speak on behalf of the Yale crew. Delegates from all of the crews participating in the regatta are desirous of attending the dinner. The Yale men will return to the United States separately, as some of them intend visiting the Continent or elsewhere before going home.

THE OPERA COMPANY ORGANIZED.

MEETING OF THE DIRECTORS OF ABBEY SCHOEFFEL & GRAU-THE COVENT GARDEN PLAN. meeting of the directors of the new corporation of Abbey, Schoeffel & Grau was held at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday morning. It was for the purpose of organization, the company having been incorporated on Monday. to out of town. George L. Rives, the counsel for the company, was also present. William Steinway was elected president of the company, and Robert Duniap vice-president. Ernest Goerlitz was chosen secretary and treasurer, and Messrs. Abbey. Schoeffel and Grau were made managing directors. Bylaws were adopted, and a considerable amount of routine business was transacted.

There seems to be no doubt that Maurice Grau will become the manager of the opera at Covent Garden. Mr. Rives said yesterday that he did not understand that the agreement that the members of the old firm of Abbey. Schoeffel & Grau should not engage in any other operatic business had anything to do with the case, as this applied only to operatic business in the United States. Even if the present case was in point, the advantage to the company here of having Mr. Grau at the head of affairs in London was so obvious that there could be no possible objection to it. Mr. Lauterbech, who represents Mr. Grau, said that Mr. Grau had received an offer to take charge of Covent Garden, that all his friends here had advised him to accept it, and that he supposed that negotiations to that end were now going on.

END OF A WILL CONTEST.

THE CONTESTANTS OF THE BEQUEST OF SISTER CARMELITA WITHDRAW.

The contest over the will of Mary Frances Baker, known as Sister Carmelita, was withdrawn yesterday before Surrogate Fitzgerald, and the will day before Surrogate Fitzgerald, and the will was admitted to probate. Letters testamentary under the will were issued to William J. Lardner and Maurice J. Suilivan, whom Sister Carmelita had named us executors. Sister Carmelita died last August, and left an estate valued at $15,000. This estate was left to her neice, Mary Suilivan, by a will dated February 27, 1885. The will was contested by the testator's nephew, Richard White Hennessy, who alleged unsound mind and undue influence. When the case was called yesterday before Surrogate Fitzgerald, counsel for Joseph F. Suilivan, who gave notice of contest after Mr. Hennessy withdrew his contest, said that he saw no reason to continue the contest. On motion of John M. Bowers, counsel for Mary Suilivan, the will was admitted to probate. Both sides declined to say whether or not a compromise had been effected.

VINCENT C. KING'S BEQUESTS. HE LEAVES HIS BUSINESS INTERESTS TO HIS SON, WITH THE STIPULATION THAT HIS WIDOW BE CARED FOR.

The will of Vincent C. King was filed yesterday at the Surrogate's office. Mr. King was a member of the firm of V. C. & C. V. King. His interest in that business is left to his son, Vincent C. King, jr who is also to receive the factory property Horatio and West sts., and the country seat longing to the testator, at Wilton, Saratoga Coun-

These bequests are made with the stipulation that he pay the sum of $2,500 per year toward the maintainance and support of his mother, unless the remainder of the ertate, which is left to her in trust, yields an income of $5,000. In that case he shall not be required to contribute toward the support of his mother. If the income from the residue of the estate exceeds the sum of $5,000, the surplus is to be divided among the children of Mr. King. The widow, Mrs. Ann Louise King, and the son, Vincent C. King, Jr., are made executors of the estate.

EX-SENATOR CULLEN'S WILL

The will of ex-Senator John J. Cullen was offered for probate yesterday. He leaves his entire estate to his widow, and appoints her excutor of the will. The personal property amounts to about $10,000, but the realty is not estimated.

Surrogate Arnold yesterday denied an application made by Edward T. Smith for permission to come in and defend an order removing him as executor the will of Thomas Smith. In 1894 Thomas Smith died, leaving considerable real estate to deel, leaving considerable real estate to his chardren, Margaret A. and Thomas F. Smith. The executor is the cousin of the children.
Several months ago the children asked that Edward T. Smith be removed as executor, on the ground that he was mismanaging the estate. Smith did not put in an answer, and was removed. He wished to have the case reopened.

THE FUTURE OF ABBEY'S THEATRE.

When Al. Hayman came home from Europe on the Fourth of July he said that he did not wish to say anything as to what was to be done at Abbey's Theatre, of which he is hereafter to be the manager till he had had a talk with Mr. Goelet, the owner He thought that he should be ready to say some He thought that he should be ready to say something yesterday. He was not ready yesterday, however, not having had an opportunity to see Mr. Goelet as yet. Mr. Hayman will not even say what the name of the theatre is to be, though it is suspected nobody seems to know just why, that it will be the Goelet Theatre. It is said that the engagement of Richard Mansfield at the Garrick Theatre will be transferred to this house, and the engagement of John Hare at the Garrick will be transferred likewise. This is in order to make room for an extended run of William Gillette's play "Scoret Service" at the Garrick. It is to follow the short engagement of Mr. Chevalier, and it is hoped that it will prove such a success that it can be kept on the stage for a long time. The theatre which is now Abbey's is to be managed by Charles Frohman and Nixon & Zimmerman, of Philadelphia, in conjunction with Mr. Hayman. stage for a Abbey's is to be man, of Nixon & Zimmerman, of tion with Mr. Hayman.

TWO DEMOCRATIC VIEWS OF DUTY.

DON'T BOLT, BUT VOTE FOR M'KINLEY. From The New-York Herald.

From The New-York Herald.

We hope, therefore, that the sound-money leaders at Chicago, who have done their utmost in reasoning and conciliation, will not allow the rudeness and open contempt with which the silver and Populist leaders have treated them to tempt them to a mistake which the silver men would had, with joy. We hope they will not make the dangerous error of planning a third party movement and putting a third ficket into the field.

It would be a hazardous and possibly a fatal mistake. If the free-silver and Populist fanatics succeed at Chicago the issue is clearly made, and as in 1861 loyal Democrats stood by their country, regardless of cherished party bonds, so now it is their clear duty to do the same. It will not do to weaken the sound-money—the honest-dollar—forces by division in the face of this combine of silver fanatics and Populists of both parties, striking at the honor and weifare of the country.

So far we rejoice to see no signs of any purpose of the sound-money Democrats in the country to put a third ticket in the field. No such intention has been disclosed, and the language of Mr. Whitney and the able and honorable Democrats who are acting with him does not even hint at such a design. We have reason to believe also that such a movement would not have the approval of sound-money overs, in the face of what has gone on and is going on. It is becoming a common saying among such men, "If Chicago goes for free silver I shall vote for McKindey." This is the true spirit, and we believe this will be the general determination of sound-money Democrats everywhere; not merely in the East, but in the South, the Northwest and West. "We must settle this question once for all and at the polls. It will not do to have an uncertain result in November, and let the decizion of the Presidency go to the House of Representatives," writes a Democrat to us. "The country needs rest from this everlasting and mischief-making silver business. If Chicago goes wong or wabbles I shall vote for McKinley, When we have put down this silver and Populist combine, then we can come at other questions, and I am not afraid for the future of a real Democratic party."

That is plain truth and sound judgment. Nothing would delight the silver and Populist combine so much as to see a movement among the sound-money Democratis to put a third ticket in the field, and thus divide the sound-money sentiment of the country.

A BOLT INEVITABLE.

A BOLT INEVITABLE.

A BOLT INEVITABLE.

From The Brooklyn Eagle.

We trust that Mr. Whitney will grow from management to manhood; that Mr. Hill will rise to a plane upon which almost a miracle is required to suppose him; that Mr. Purcell will throw hesitancy to the winds, and stand forth with a resolution worthy of the profession of which he is so cleareyed a representative, and that even Cantor. Hinckley, the two Sheehans and others—to say mothing of the Kings county delegation, of whom nothing is the most and the best that can be said—will experience an uplift to the side of Bissell and Coudert, who, both as statesmen and as moralists, see the future in the instant and who stand resolute and ready to-day to do and to say the things which they know the trimmers and the cravens will have to do and say hereafter. Oh, why should men not be men at once and mush-kins and mannikms never and nowhere!

We have no fear that the sound money Democracy will acquiesce in a free silver platform, a ticket of repudiation and of anarchy and the trampling out of the rights of sound money delegates in the Convention. A boit is inevitable. A Democratic licket, for which Democrats can vote, is becoming a necessity.

of the building when Johnson rushed in, waving the revolver and declaring that he would shoot anybody who stood in his way. The painters got out of his way in a hurry, and he ran around through the hall to the exit on Twentieth-st. Carleton had run to that doorway, thinking he could head off the murderer that way, and when he saw Johnson coming toward him he made mind and drew back at the sight of the waving revolver. Johnson had a box of cartridges in his left hand at that time, and in his flight he was trying to reload the weapon. He must have managed to get one fresh cartridge into the revolver, because the weapon had only five chambers, and he had already fired three shots, while he was still to fire three more shots in his mad

When the crowd saw him emerge from the Presbyterian Building and run along Twentiethst. toward Sixth-ave, there was another chorus of yells, to which the fugitive responded with another harmless shot. A minute later, as he was running along the north side of the street, he partly turned and fired behind him. The bullet crossed the street diagonally and took effect in the thigh of Vaselias Kenezaeus, an Arno part in the chase. The pedler fell with a he had been mortally wounded. Both pursuing policemen fired shots in the air and still pressed on in pursuit, while many other men in the crowd showed an inclination to give up the chase. Carleton was among those who still kept up the running in advance of the policemen, raised the muzzle of the revolver in his hand to his own head and pulled the trigger. There was a click, but no report. Again and again he pulled the trigger with the same result, as the hammer of the weapon struck empty shells. He was apparently becoming winded with his long run, and his face was white with the agony of despair as he saw that escape was impossible. Still he took another pull at the trigger, keeping the muzzle of the revolver pressed against his head at a point just above his right ear, and then there was a report as the only remaining cartridge with a bullet in it exploded. His pursuers saw Johnson fall forward on his face on the sidewalk, the revolver and box of cartridges falling from his hands.

Carleton and the two policemen were at the place where he fell in a second, but Johnson was already dead. The big bullet had crashed clear through his head, and a stream of blood was running out of a hole over each ear when the came faint at the sight and said to Carleton: "Catch hold of me. I'm going to drop." Carleton caught hold of the policeman who soon recovered from the effects of his long chase and the shocking sight. In a few minutes the body of Johnson was surrounded by a multitude of people. The policemen turned the body and allowed it to remain for a time with the sightless eyes staring up at the sky.

REMOVAL OF THE BODY.

Presently one of the policemen went back to Broadway to inquire what had happened there. Other policemen had taken charge of Sutton in York Hospital for an ambulance. Policemen also examined the wounded pedler in Twentiethst., and assured him that he was going to live. The woman who was with Sutton before the him to Sixth-ave, and identify the body of the man who had shot Sutton. At first she refused, saying the man would kill her, but when she she rejuctantly went with the policeman. At sight of the body she became so hysterical that it was impossible to get any information from her for a time. When she was asked to go near the body and look at the face, she screamed, drew back and raised her skirts from the sidewalk as if she thought they were being smeared with blood. At length the police placed the body of John-West Thirtieth-st. Two policemen walked with way she continued to weep and cry out. At the station she said she recognized the body as that of William Johnson, but the police could get little information about the man. In the course of her partly incoherent talk, she was understood to say that she had known Johnson in Chicago and that he had wanted to marry her and had given a watch to her. She said she was Mrs. Melma Sutton and had come to this city only a few days ago to live with her husband, William H. Sutton, at No. 43 Greenwich-ave. She and her husband had been in Lord & Taylor's store, at Broadway and Twentieth-st., she said, and they met Johnson on the sidewalk. He wanted her to give back the watch and there was some more talk and then he began to shoot. Her husband, she said, was a salesman for the firm of Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, but he had been selling goods in this city lately. Johnson had been in this city only a day or two, she said. When Johnson's body was searched at the station the police found in his pockets only 85 cents, a pawn ticket, a silk handkerchief and two empty pocketbooks. Failing to get more information from the young woman, the police let her go to her room in Greenwich-ave. Meanwhile ambulances had carried Sutton and the Armenian pedler to the New-York Hospital. Sutton had regained consciousness, but the surgeons said his wound was probably fatal, and Coroner Hoeber was summoned to take the man's ante-mortem statement. Before the Coroner arrived Sutton said he was a single man and had been shot by a men who was a stranger to him. The man had been annoying the woman he was with, he said. At No. 43 Greenwich-ave., late in the afternoon, the young woman was so hysterical that no information about the tragedy could be obtained TALK OF CHARLES R. SKINNER FOR PRESIDENT from her. The place is a boarding-house, and the landlady said that Sutton had been boarding there about two months, while the woman whom he had introduced as his wife had arrived only a few days ago.

SUTTON'S ANTE-MORTEM STATEMENT.

Coroner Hoeber arrived at the hospital at 7 o'clock and was immediately taken to the bedside of Sutton, who was then under the influence of ether. The surgeons had extracted the bullet from Sutton's head, and when he was again conscious he gave to the Coroner the antemortem statement, of which the following is the mortem statement, or which it is a stranger to me. I have never spoken to him. I have only seen him once in my life. To-day he insulted my lady friend and I threatened to have him arrested if he did not stop following and annoying us. I turned away. The next thing I knew I was lying in the street. The Coroner left the injured man and hurried to No. 43 Greenwich-ave. His object was to get a statement from the woman known as Mrs. Sutton, but he was informed that she had just gone to visit her alleged husband at the hospital. Coroner Hoeber was on his way back to the hespital when he spied a weeping woman walking up Seventh-ave. He spoke to her. There was a young man with her, and the two went with the Coroner to the hospital, where the Coroner had a long conversation with the woman.

THE PEDLER'S CONDITION.

The pedler, Vaselias Kenezacus, who lives at No. 48 Oak-st., was resting easily in the New-York Hospital last evening. The bullet has been extracted from his thigh, and there was said to be no doubt of his recovery. When the Coroner attempted to take his statement, he found that the wounded man could not speak English.

A reporter for The Tribune saw the woman at her boarding place, No. 43 Greenwich-ave., late last night. In addition to what she had told Coroner Hoeber, Mrs. Sutton said that she first met Johnson in St. Paul, Minn., and that she was married to Sutton in Chicago three years ago. They afterward went to San Francisco. She left her husband in the latter city and returned to Chicago alone. She met Johnson there again, and he insisted on paying attentions to again, and he insisted on paying attentions to her. She went to the theatre once or twice with him, and he gave her a present. Her husband again rejoined her in Chicago, but left her again to come to this city, where she followed him. Mrs. Richard Burns, who keeps the house at No. 43 Greenwich-ave, is well known in the neighborhood. Her husband has a stationery store on the opposite side of the street. She told the reporter that Sutton had occupied his room in the house about two months, and that the woman joined him about ten days ago. She said that they were a well-behaved couple. The only caller they had had was a young man named Matthews. Detectives Caddell and Welch took the woman to the West Thirtieth-st. station last night after she made her statement to Coroner Hoeber at the New-York Hospital, and they said that she had practically admitted to them that she and Sutton had never been married, and that she was only his common-law wife. They said that all they had been able to find out about Johnson was that he was a bartender, and that he had worked in Dearborn-st., Chicago.

Through his lifelong denition of his services, the American Society of Pro fersors of Dancing, with headquarters in New-York of which he had been a member, had elected him its president for a number of terms. Mr. Spink was sixty-five years old.

THE TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

-PAPERS AND LECTURES. Buffalo, July &-The National Educational Association held two sessions to-day. The morning session was addressed by Brander Matthews, of Columbia, on "Literature and American Literature"; South, on "The Teaching of Literature, with Special Reference to Secondary Schools," and by Mrs. Ella F. Young, of Chicago, on "Literature in Elementary Schools." The evening session was ad-dressed by the Rev. John H. Vincent, Chancellor of Chautauqua University, on "School Out of School The report of the Committee on Nomination and Election of Officers will not be submitted until tomorrow morning, but there is considerable talk that New-York State is to be favored with the presidency. Charles R. Skinner, of Albany, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, is prominently mentioned, and may be siated for the position. Minneapolis seems likely to be chosen as the next meeting place, although Detroit is making a strong fight. Before the department of kindergarten education to-day Miss Sarah Willise, of Roxbury, Mass., spoke on "The Purpose of the Story in the Kindergarten," and Miss Mary McDowell, of Chicago, on "The Children of Our Cities."

The department of manual and industrial education was addressed by President Keyes, of Throop Polytechnic Institute, Pasadena, Call, and by Mrs. Nelle Kedzie, of Kansas, on "The Need of Manual Training for Giris." New-York State is to be favored with the presi

MR. HARRIGAN AT THE BIJOU. The announcement is made that Edward Harri-

gan is to begin an engagement at the Bijou Theatre on August 31. He will present his newest play, on August 31. He will present his newest play, "Marty Maione," The play is said to be on somewhat the same lines as "Old Lavender." Mr. Harrigan's part is that of a sailor. There is a scene in a sailors' boarding-house, and one on the shore of Long Island. The company is not yet made up, and it is not certain whether it will include any of Mr. Harrigan's old company, but it is likely that a few of the old faces will be seen on the stage. Mr. Harrigan has not acted in New-York since his theatre, which is now the Garrick, was closed on account of his severe sickness, nearly a year and a half ago. THE "ANCIENTS" AT WINDSOR

MR. AND MRS. BAYARD GUESTS AT THE CASTLE-A REVIEW AT ALDERSHOT TO-DAY IN HON-

OR OF THE ARTILLERY COMPANY.

July 6.-The visiting members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston left the Hotel Cecil this morning for Windsor, marching with band and colors to the Water oo They were escorted by the band of the Station. Honourable Artillery Company of London, and accompanied by the Earl of Denbigh, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Honourable Artillery Company. The Boston company were cheered all along the route. Upon the arrival of the Company at Windsor they were received at the station by the Mayor, the members of the Windsor Corporation and a guard of honor. After being welcomed they marched to upon the East Terrace and had introduced to her the colonel and adjutant of the Boston company. Her Her Majesty expressed satisfaction at seeing the corps, saying she hoped that they had had a pleasant passage from America and that they would enjoy their

The arrangements for the reception of the Ancient and Homorables were in charge of Major-General Sir John Carstairs McNeill, Equerry in Ordinary to the Queen. During the march of the company past the Queen Her Majesty remained seated in the carriage in which she had been driven to the place appointed for the review. She did not at any time alight. The Princess Precierca of Hanover and several of the ladies of the court were present in levee dress. The Guards were turned out as a mark of honor to the Artillery Company.

The visitors were then entertained at luncheon in the orangery and afterward were conducted through the state apartments of the castle. They returned to the railway station at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, The entire route from the castle to the station was profusely decorated with flags, and the Stars and Stripes were holsted upon the Town Hall.

Ambassador Bayarff and Mrs. Bayard were present at the inspection of the Artillery Company by the Queen. Mr. and Mrs. Bayard will remain at the castle as the guests of the Queen until to-morrow.

Some of the members of the visiting corps went to Woolwich after their reception and Inspection by the Queen to dine with the artillery officers stationed there, while others visited the Imperial Institute. The women of the party spect their time at the Earl's Court exhibition. The entire party will make
